I have been 3D printing my objects for a little while and have done well. I have found that my parts shrink significantly after the printing process. So, I would like to know what I can do to keep this from happening? I have tried various glues, size of the model, and other things I read about, but I have found no real improvement. I have been printing on a Prusa i3 Mk1. This particular model had some very tiny holes, so I was forced to make some modifications to the print. I have added supports 2d92ce491b
