The architect is not known, but it appears to have been finished in 1740. The building is three storeys high. The upper part, which is in the shape of a mansard roof, has five dormers. History The building was built in 1732 for the Marquis de Bricau. It was purchased by Jean-Baptiste Augustin, a banker and friend of the Marquis de Bricau, in 1734. He demolished the building and built in its place a new hôtel particulier. The new building had a mansard roof. The château du Bricau on the banks of the Seine was sold to the engineer François-Joseph Manceur in 1805. Owners 1734
