Wikipedia and Wiktionary are there to help you whenever you are at a dead end and need to find out info about a specific term, notion, or whatnot in an instant. Besides, Wikiquote, Wikibooks, and Wikisource should provide you with a healthy dose of academic references if you are in the stage of research and want to start a well-documented project. Wikispecies, Wikivoyage, and Wikinews should be welcome if you have a sweet tooth for all-round education as well as if you want to be kept in the loop with the latest events in the world. Commons is the section where you need to go to explore media files based on a series of filters, and last but not least, there is Meta-Wiki, which encompasses all the info users interested in being a part of Wikimedia projects should find. Furthermore, it will help you when you are at work and need to focus on your tasks while providing you with a wealth of useful information, plus, it will make things simpler when browsing the web. In a nutshell, Black Menu for Wikipedia is a handy Chrome extension that can help you save time and get the job done faster, plus, with all the listed projects on offer, it should boost your productivity. No. 5,942,178 to Farrer, et al. discloses a method for making a three dimensional structure by building up a structure layer by layer by plating each layer onto a previously applied layer. The method of this patent also includes forming at least one opening within a first layer and then forming at least one aperture within a second layer by depositing a material onto the first layer, which material has a first property at the surface of the first layer, and thereafter removing the material from the first layer until the surface of the first layer is substantially free from the first material. U.S. Pat. No. 5,897,650 to Delaire, et al. discloses a method of shaping a first section of a tooth replacement which comprises the steps of a) providing a work surface of the first section, b) providing a stent formed by a first stent member, and c) providing a mold section with a second stent member. The first stent member and the second stent member are each of a refractory metal and are disposed relative to each other to form a gap therein. A molten material is injected into the gap so that the molten material is restricted to form a hollow preformed stent structure. U.S. Pat. No. 5,897,651 to Stavridis, et al. discloses a dental implant with a plurality of anchors for attaching the implant to the jaw bone and a connecting member to join the anchors in a dental prosthetic reconstruction. The connecting member includes a first end portion which is affixed to a first anchor and a second end portion which is affixed to a second anchor. U.S. Pat. No. 5,702,491 to Grauzer, et al. discloses a dental implant for supporting a dental prosthesis. The implant has a frusto-
