The Multidisciplinary Clinical Research Center at the Minneapolis Veterans Affairs Medical Center consists of a core group of laboratories and research programs working on neoplasia and non-neoplastic diseases. It is a service unit which serves as a research base for both in-house and outside research groups in the neurosurgical, vascular, and physical medicine and rehabilitation services. An Advisory Committee meets monthly to evaluate current projects and future needs of the program. A major emphasis has been on quantitative approaches to understanding the basic science and clinical problems. Major areas of research have included neuroepidemiology, spinal cord ischemia and animal models of brain injury. Recent research projects in the CRC have addressed the epidemiology and management of stroke, and various aspects of brain injury. The Clinical Research Coordinator is responsible for coordinating all aspects of the clinical research projects including obtaining IRB approvals, maintaining clinical records, maintaining institutional I.R.B. approval, coordinating data collection, monitoring of adverse reactions, preparing reports, maintaining databases, and facilitating future studies. Major problems which need to be addressed in the CRC include identifying and coordinating the resources needed for the research projects. In this regard, several priorities have been identified. These include: 1) to provide both administrative and technical support for a quality clinical trials environment; 2) to assure quality control in clinical trials by educating clinical investigators, support staff, and IRB members about issues related to quality control and documentation of medical records; 3) to identify and ensure the appropriate level of documentation for research records

Q: How to switch between states in a game on iPhone I'm developing a simple game for iPhone and I have 2 states: -Playing state, where you use buttons and your virtual character does stuff -Quit state, where you just make some icons appear. I have a button for each state, but if I press it, the iPhone just executes the code for the currently executing state, regardless of the state I was in. How do I make the iPhone execute the code for a different state? A: I'd probably do something like this. Let's say you have two buttons, play and quit. When the play button is pressed, you have a variable named state that is either

The other option that I can think of is to compress a list of every folder you want to change. Otherwise... As long as you change the name (and have the correct version of the icon, of course), you're fine. I actually did this after I first saw the icon in action and I used this icon the rest of the way. If you did it on a computer without the icons already set up, it might be a little tricky to get things back to normal if you need to go back to what the OS sets up, but I'm sure it's possible. As mentioned, a good approach is to have the location of the location folders and use them as a template.
