Field of the Invention This invention relates to a flat panel display comprising the combination of a liquid crystal display (LCD) and a field emission display (FED), and more particularly to an active matrix liquid crystal display system and field emission display system which are able to provide high resolution picture display. 2. Description of the Prior Art In the active matrix liquid crystal display system, active elements such as a thin film transistor or a diode are provided as switching elements for every pixel, and the crystal orientation of the liquid crystal molecules in the liquid crystal layer is electrically changed in each pixel by controlling the voltage applied across a picture element electrode and a counter electrode by means of the active element. Further, in an active matrix field emission display system (hereinafter abbreviated as "FED" when necessary), light emission is carried out by electrons emitted from a cold cathode, and the electron beams are scanned by a scan line and a signal line provided on a light transmission substrate (hereinafter referred to as "front substrate" when necessary). The conventional active matrix liquid crystal display system and field emission display system have the following problems. That is, in the case of the active matrix liquid crystal display system, it is difficult to realize a large screen display because the number of scan lines (or address lines) per inch increases as the size of the screen increases and because, moreover 570a42141b
