I have tried switching from gif to jpg (with and without the quality setting) and a few other things, but nothing changes the result! A: This issue is actually the result of having low-quality images that come from a high-resolution source (e.g. photos). They are then converted to web-safe gifs through a very low quality setting. Compressing the images results in loss of detail and compression artefacts. You can try converting the high-resolution images to web-ready jpeg's and convert the web-safe gifs to web-ready jpg's, this should result in the jpg's being fine. Check out this answer for more info on image formats. I hope this helps Bogotá Overland This is the luxury version of the Gold Tour that will take you from Bogotá, Colombia to Quito, Ecuador.
